An early picture of Ocean Avenue looking west from near the intersection of what is now Federal Highway. The building to the right sits on land that is now a small City park and just east of it on what then appeared to be a vacant lot are now the offices of Harvey Oyer and Oyer Insurance. The nearest building on the left (demolished about five years ago) was the first Woman’s Club building.

A PLEA, AND A WORD OF THANKS
Material included in The Historian and placed in our archives in the City Library is important for preserving the names and events that comprise the history of the City. We beg you to think of us when going through pictures, letters, articles, and other family memorabilia. Please either give them to us, or let us copy them to preserve for posterity the presence and accomplishments of you and your family members.

Many of the pictures and stories we have included recently have been shared through the generosity of Frances McKeral, James Shelton, Jim Edward, Jack Suiter, Georgie Raulerson, Rosalie Morrisey, and members of the Lacey, Lyman, Murray, Oyer, Rousseau, Weaver, Weeks, Weems, and other long-time families, but we need more about earlier people, and much more about more recent arrivals.

DUES FOR 2009 ARE DUE!
Just a reminder! Our membership year begins January 1 and runs to December 31 each year. A big thank you to those of you who have already sent in your dues. Please note on the address label on this issue of The Historian when your dues expire. Please renew ASAP and save us the cost and labor of mailing out separate dues notices.

If you are a current member, just send us your check unless there are name, address, or telephone changes. We are grateful for your continuing support.
Pages submitted from The Palm Beach Times in 1926 illustrate two proposed land developments from the “Boom” period. Apparently the “Boom” went bust before either actually “got off the ground.”  [Submitted by Boynton Beach Historical Society member Jim Edward.]
TWO DAYS TO HONOR

The January meeting of the Boynton Beach Historical Society is scheduled on the same day as Martin Luther King’s birthday, a national holiday, and the day before the inauguration of America’s first President of African descent. The following composite from the files of the Society reflects a different time, and illustrates some of the ways our country has changed in the last 62 years.
The Prosperous Town of Boynton

Interesting Description of a Palm Beach County Truck and Fruit Growing Community by E.E.E.

The town of Boynton will soon celebrate its fifteenth birthday, so far as being a place where people live. Fifteen years ago some of our most prosperous citizens landed here and pitched their tents until houses could be built. Among these pioneers were Mr. and Mrs. Bert L. Kapp, H. B. Murray and family, Funk Brothers, Freedlund Brothers, the late Cullen Pearce and others who have left our town.

These people came to West Palm Beach by train, that being as far as the Florida East Coast road extended at that time. From there they came by launch to the foot of the lake; here they found a broken trail to the site where our village is now located.

You ask any one of these early settlers if they were unhappy and despondent and they will each declare “those were happy days”—each in a measure being just a member of a large family. The men went barefooted to save shoes and many of the women also. They truly shared each other’s sorrows and joys, all striving for one and the same thing—a comfortable home.

All supplies were purchased at the M.B. Lyman store located at Lantana, four miles north of Boynton, and were delivered twice a week by boat.

The men went to work with a will and soon had homes built and gardens planted on the fertile lands lying along the canal.

In a few months the railroad was extended to Miami and a service of one passenger train a day was inaugurated.

When Christmas time came, the mothers became worried lest there would be no Christmas tree for the little ones—the men were appealed to and they readily solved the problem by all going to work and completing the home of the Funk Brothers which was only partly built. Here I may say was the happiest Christmas in Boynton. There was no great display of presents on the tree, but the true Christmas spirit was in evidence everywhere.

When crops were harvested and returns all in, all were poorer financially than in the beginning, but they still had courage and the next fall planted their crops and cared for them faithfully, and the outcome was more hopeful than the first year.

New settlers kept coming, which added new interest, and slowly the foundations of our pretty little town were made.

Boynton now proudly boasts of being one of the most prosperous towns on the Florida East Coast.

The beautiful concrete Methodist church would be a credit to any town, being built entirely by the citizens of Boynton and vicinity. Services are held regularly and are well attended by all denominations.

A most excellent school for eight months of the year is maintained, Boynton being one of the “special school tax districts” of Palm Beach county. During the coming year, a $6,000 building is to be erected.

The town was named for Major N.S. Boynton of Port Huron, Mich., known everywhere as “Father of the Maccabees.” The Major owns a great deal of valuable land in and around Boynton and is always glad when winter comes to be numbered one of our citizens.

The town is situated twelve miles south of the famous winter resort, Palm Beach. The Florida East Coast railroad crosses the center of the town. All the main streets of the town are covered with rock and the county rock road passes through the town. A number of the growers have built rock roads to their pine fields lying west of our town.

A good rock road was built by the citizens to the ocean beach, which is a half mile from our town, the Government canal being about half way between the town and the Atlantic ocean. A drawbridge is now under way, which will eliminate all trouble in getting to the ocean readily. A public bath house is maintained and bathing is the popular pastime all year round.

A thriving Woman’s Club was organized last year and will probably build a new club house for their use during the coming winter.

The men have a club, known as the “Pioneer Club.” They own their own club room and equipment. . . Orange and grapefruit culture has never been entered into very extensively, but the past year or two the “Dewey Grove” has shown that there is no doubt as to the success of citrus fruit being raised easily and the quantity and quality of being above par. Several years ago Mr. Frederick S. Dewey planted a grove of several acres on his muck sand along the canal. Some predicted success, some failure, but all were anxiously awaiting the outcome. The crops of the past two years have left no doubt as to whether it paid or not—the fruit has been excellent in flavor and abundant in production. Several groves have planted trees now and more are to be planted during the winter.

But Boynton’s best crop is tomatoes. Commission merchants are agreed that Boynton lands produce the finest tomatoes on the coast. Each year from one hundred and fifty to two hundred acres are planted, and as high as one thousand crates per acre have been produced, but this is a little out of the ordinary. . . But this is not all that Boynton lands have produced. Many growers plant beans, pepper, egg-plant, squash, celery, cabbage, red cabbage and cucumbers for the early markets . . . Onions, sweet and Irish potatoes have been grown with success. . .

Fishing is good here at all seasons of the year. They are to be had from the ocean, salt Lake Worth and the fresh water Lakes west of the town.

The Palm Beach Lands Co., of West Palm Beach owns an immense tract of land west of the fresh water lakes in the ‘Glades and are selling large tracts daily. Several of our citizens have invested and have commenced work on their holdings, having the land cleared and the seed beds planted. . . Boynton has a population of less than five hundred citizens who represent almost every state in the Union and several foreign countries. They are good law-abiding people who are interested in the growth of our town . . .
