AFRICAN AMERICAN HISTORY:
BOYNTON BEACH & FLORIDA

In honor of Black History Month, on February 15, several members of the Boynton Beach Historical Society and other representatives from the City will discuss a little, self-published book by Br. Victor Norfus, Boynton Beach & Florida; African American History. Br. Norfus and Odessa Holt have worked together to complete the research. Several months ago The Historian included a list Victor had prepared of African Americans pioneers who resided in Boynton in 1918. Using this list as a starting point, Victor, Odessa, and Carole Mahoney will describe the contents of the book. Victor has invited a number of people whom he interviewed to the meeting to participate in the discussion afterward. Among these are his mother Dr. Martha Meeks Light, Edith Palmer, and Blanche Girtman.

The book is dedicated to the 1918 pioneers it discusses and to the Heritage Park Honorees of Boynton Beach. The Heritage Park Honorees listed below all had a significant impact in a particular area of service to the community whether it was social, religious, educational, or governmental.

Copies of the book will be available for $10.00, and a CD related especially to the 1918 pioneers is $5.00.

The Heritage Park Honorees are: William H. Miller, Blanche Hearst Girtman, Juanita Sutlles Meeks, Samuel Lamar Wright, Rev. Randolph M. Lee, Clyde Harris, Leroy Harris, Jr., James Willis Butler.

All programs of the Boynton Beach Historical Society are free and open to the Public.

WHAT: Discussion and Book Review by Victor Norfus and others
WHEN: Monday, February 15, 6:30 p.m.
WHERE: Boynton Woman’s Club, 1010 South Federal Hwy.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS TO MEET

The Board of Directors of the Boynton Beach Historical Society will meet Monday, March 1, 2010, 6:30 p.m. at the Boynton Woman’s Club. We did not have a quorum present for the February meeting, so any actions were postponed to the March meeting.

All meetings of the Board are open to any member in good standing. Members who attend are welcome to participate in the discussion, but only Board members may vote on an item. A notice of this meeting will be posted on our website.

ANNUAL MEETING SCHEDULED FOR APRIL

According to the Bylaws of the Society, we must hold our Annual Meeting in April. The primary business of this meeting is the election and installation of new officers, directors, and trustees. If we are considering any amendments to the Bylaws, they are also discussed and voted on at the Annual Meeting. A Nominating Committee is appointed in February, and the composition of that Committee will be announced at the February 15 Program Meeting. The names of the Nominating Committee members will be posted on the website by the time of the February meeting.

For the organization to continue functioning, we need members to volunteer to serve in office. All officers are elected annually. Directors and trustees serve for 3 year staggered terms. Thus, this year we will elect the president, 1st vice-president, 2nd vice-president, recording secretary, corresponding secretary, treasurer, two directors to serve until 2013, and two trustees to serve until 2013. If you would be willing to accept one of these offices, contact the chairman or one of the members of the Nominating Committee. Their names and phone numbers will be listed on the website. Please help us to build this organization.

IN MEMORIAM

LINDSEY GARNETT-- We are saddened by the death this past summer of Lindsey Garnett after a lingering illness. He was a grandson of Andrew Garnett who came into this area as an early pioneer. All five of Andrew Garnett’s children were community leaders and played major roles in the development of the area. Lindsey was the son of Irl, Andrew’s oldest son, and Julia, both long deceased. Lindsey was an active member of the Boynton Beach Historical Society and attended our meetings regularly. Our best wishes go to his widow Elaine, their son Michael, and his sister Katherine Garnett Eubanks.

MARGARET “Peggy” ROUSSEAU— Peggy, another active member and supporter of the Boynton Beach Historical Society, passed away in mid January. The Rousseaus have been a major force throughout the history of Boynton and the state of Florida. In the past, The Historian has contained a number of articles, features, and pictures contributed by various family members.

Peggy, with husband John, had four children. Two, Bob and Sheila Rousseau Taylor are also members of the Historical Society. Another son, Jimmie, lives in Clewiston. A second daughter died several years ago. Sheila is a member of our Board of Directors. We send our condolences to all the Rousseau family, but especially to Peggy’s children and their families.

A GIFT HONORING THE SUITERS

One of the members of the Boynton Beach Historical Society, Daniel R. Suiter, has recently made a gift to the Society of $1,000 to honor the memory of his parents, John N. and Kathleen T. Suiter.

John and Kathleen, who both passed away in 2008, were long time members and supporters of the Society. They had lived for almost 50 years in the same home in Palm Springs.

Just a few weeks before his death, John sent a number of photographs of his parents, his immediate family, and other family members to our Archives.

John’s grandfather was Robert H. Rousseau who served in the 1890s as a representative from this area on the Dade County Board of Commissioners. (Remember in 2009 we celebrated the 100th anniversary of the creation of Palm Beach County when it was separated from Dade County.) The Rousseau family has been in Florida for many generations. Some had moved into North Florida about the time the United States acquired Florida from Spain. Robert Rousseau had been one of the first to move into what is now Boynton Beach. One of Robert’s daughters, Verna Rousseau, was the mother of John N. Suiter.

We are so grateful to Dan for choosing to honor his parents through this generous gift to the Boynton Beach Historical Society. It is our honor to celebrate committed individuals who have sought to preserve the history of our local heritage.

Thank you, Dan, for your role in helping to make this possible.
FROM AN EARLIER HISTORIAN - - -

The following page appeared originally in The Historian November, 2002. At the time the editor copied the pictures borrowed from Bob Katz who had used them to decorate the interior of the historic old Katie Andrews which still stands a block south of Ocean Avenue on the west side of the Florida East Coast Railway tracks. Bob Katz had moved the house from its original location and restored it. It is still a part of the Bob Katz estate.

The same picture of the Reverend James Butler, Sr. is one that Victor Norfus includes in his collection. Notice also that Odessa Holt was working at that time to preserve Boynton’s African American history.

The only male child in the photo grew up to become the first black to join the Boynton Beach Police Department. James Willis (Bill) Butler still resides in Boynton.

Odessa Holt and David Harp are currently doing research and compiling historical data about the black community. Let's hope that with our combined efforts we can preserve more of the Boynton Beach heritage.
CONSTRUCTION OF A DEPRESSION HOUSE

By Voncile Smith

Several years ago I wrote a story for The Historian about the sawmill my grandfather, R.M. Fletcher, began operating on Military Trail about a mile north of the Boynton Canal in late 1936. He had been a lumberman most of his life, and this was mill #59. At the time he was renting a 1920s house in Lake Worth. Then timber was still relatively plentiful, especially on the Lake Worth Drainage District right of way. From the time he acquired the mill, he had planned to build a new house of his own not too far from the mill site.

This was a period before poured concrete foundations and cement block construction had gained a foothold in housing construction. Frame houses were built off the ground a foot or more with wooden floors, high ceilings, and windows placed to allow good cross ventilation. There was no air-conditioning, and, if people had any heat at all in cool weather, it was provided by fireplaces supplemented by the use of space heaters.

Since my grandfather had access to lumber in any amount, size and length he might need, building materials were not a problem. Labor was. He hired some of his more skilled mill hands to work on the house when he was not operating the saw mill or his planning mill, or searching for timber. Progress was slow.

He purchased 16 acres of some rather swampy land on Military Trail about a mile north of the mill yard, chose a spot for the house and had numerous dump truck loads of fill hauled in to raise the height of the yard where the house was to stand. Construction began in January, 1937. No architect was involved. My grandfather knew how to design and determine lumber needs for rectangular houses, and this was to be H-shaped, composed of three rectangles.

The south leg of the H was constructed first. This would ultimately be the south side of the house consisting of two bedrooms and a bath. But the initial rooms had no electricity or plumbing and were divided by studs which at first had nothing covering them, but later planed 1x10 boards were nailed to the studs to provide interior walls covered with wallpaper when the house was completed.

My father and mother were travelling around the country while Daddy tried to sell planetariums and encyclopedias to various school systems. I needed to attend school regularly, so I was left with my grandparents and my aunt Mary and enrolled in Boynton School.

The four of us moved into the three rooms right after New Years in 1938. We had an old-fashioned hand pump for water which we had to carry to the house for drinking, cooking, and bathing. Our bathtub was a galvanized laundry tub, but most people relied primarily on sponge baths.

The east room contained two metal framed double beds and two chests of drawers. I slept with my aunt. We hung some of our clothes in a corner which later would accommodate a closet. The middle room was smaller and was the temporary kitchen. It had a 3-burner kerosene stove with a removable oven. We also had an ice box. The ice truck delivered ice regularly to rural homes in the area. My grandmother arranged to have the wife of one of the mill workers do our washing and ironing.

The third room on the west end of the house served as the temporary living-dining area. We had two kerosene lanterns for light, so we usually went to bed early. We had no radio, but the rural mail carrier delivered a day-old Palm Beach Post regularly to our mailbox by the highway.

By the spring of 1939 the overall house was complete despite lack of windows or interior work. The house, finished and landscaped by 1940, is shown below. It was razed long ago. Now Hidden Oaks Elementary School is located where the house once stood.
