The HISTORY OF OCEAN RIDGE

Janet DeVries and Ginger Pedersen will present this program at the January meeting of the Boynton Beach Historical Society. They will discuss the time when the current City of Boynton Beach and the Town of Ocean Ridge were both part of the Town of Boynton. What factors led to the division of these two municipalities? What was the Town of Boynton Beach, and when did the City of Boynton Beach emerge? Besides a common ZIP code, what else do they share? The answers to these questions and other information will be covered in this presentation.

TWO NEW MEMBERSHIP CLASSIFICATIONS

By a unanimous vote at a meeting last fall the Board of Directors created two new membership classifications—Life Membership and Student Membership.

When the Society was new in the late 1960s, the original Bylaws provided for Life Memberships and several members subscribed. When the new Bylaws were created in the early 1990s, membership classifications were left to the discretion of the Board of Directors. The current Board has attempted to honor those earlier Life Memberships when we know of them. That is why Sandy Simon and Curtis and Nain Weaver are so listed. With the reestablishment of the category, we are proud to acknowledge two new Life Members, Randy Gill who was enrolled last year, and now Dorian Beck Trauger who has just become one. Thank you both for your continuing support of the Boynton Beach Historical Society and for becoming part of this rather elite classification.

The other membership category, Student Membership, is totally new. The Board feels that it is important for the Society to encourage student interest in history, especially that concerning our area. We hope others will follow the example set by Julianne Amaya, our very first student member, and join our organization.

IN MEMORIAM

Eleanor Murray Sala—Grandaughter of H. B. Murray, the first Mayor of the Town of Boynton, passed away in late November. She was predeceased by her parents, Bessie and Glenn Murray. She was their youngest child and only girl after her mother had given birth to five boys. Her youngest brother, Lloyd Murray, was mentioned in the November 2014 issue of The Historian as a casualty of World War II when he was only 16 years old. Of the four other brothers, only Gerald, who is a member of the Boynton Beach Historical Society, survives.

Eleanor in 2006 at Harvey Oyer’s 80th birthday party

Eleanor grew up in Boynton and was among the last graduates in 1949 of the old Boynton High School housed in the 1927 schoolhouse. She attended Florida State University for two years then transferred to the University of Florida where she majored in pharmacy. While attending UF she met and married Juan Sala from Lima, Peru. They moved to Lima where they reared two daughters, Rosemary and Teresa. When Rosemary reached college age, they moved to New Jersey and later back to Florida. They lived on Key Biscayne, and Eleanor practiced pharmacy for a number of years before retiring.

Eleanor had maintained her membership consistently in the Boynton Beach Historical Society. We will miss her support.

We extend our sympathy and best wishes to Juan and to their children and grandson Andrew.

KATHERINE FOY THOMPSON—passed away October 23, 2014. She was 93. She had grown up on the Foy Dairy, just west of what is now I-95. She was predeceased by her husband, Leonard Thompson, who was a World War II veteran. Her father had moved here from Jacksonville; and in addition to the dairy, he had operated a dragline.

She and Leonard were long time members of the Boynton Beach Historical Society, and after his death she continued to support the Society. They were originally the only residents on Thompson Road in Boynton Beach which was named in their honor.

The Society appreciates their many years of support and sends our condolences to the surviving family members.

SOME SHARED COMMENTS

Sometimes our members include little notes with their dues or in other correspondence. Below are a couple of these that we enjoyed so much, we share them with you:

“When I count my blessings, there you are and Dear Old Boynton Beach too! I feel very blessed that I grew up in Boynton Beach. I miss it and my dear old time friends! Sincerely, Gladys Knuth.” [Hiram, Georgia]

“Hi, Love receiving The Historian as I grew up in Boynton Beach. In Nov. issue (In Memory of Harold Lloyd Murray), he was a classmate of mine. His cousin Nancy Murray and I graduated Class of 1945.

“I recognize lots of old family names mentioned in the issues. Thanks for doing a great job! Have a great New Year. Mildred Hackle Lofley (Retired to No. Ga. Mountain 1979)” [Blairsville, Georgia]
Señor Boynton? Hotel Owner had Hispanic roots

By Ginger Pedersen

[Editor’s Note: Since some of you do not have use of the internet we occasionally reprint blogs from our website www.boyntonhistory.org for your enjoyment. Ginger posted this in September, 2014]

In celebration of Hispanic Heritage Month, a recent discovery about Major Nathan S. Boynton, for whom the City of Boynton Beach was named, can be brought to light.

Recently I was helping a friend with some research on her family history, and I thought it might be interesting to see if I could find some more information on Major Boynton who founded and owned the Boynton Hotel on the beach.

I first found Major Boynton on the 1860 census living near Cincinnati, Ohio. He was 23 and listed his profession as “Physician.” I had read he intended to study medicine after working in the grocery business (“mercantile”) for a few years. As the Civil War broke out, he returned to Michigan and enlisted in the cavalry. He rose in rank to Major, and mustered out in 1865, relocating to Marine City, Michigan. In the meantime, he married and started a family. On the 1870 census, he is listed as being an “editor” with wife Annie in the household along with children Charles, Annie, George and Frances.

He had purchased the local newspaper and served as editor. I did not find an 1880 census record for the family, and the 1890 census is pretty much gone, lost in a fire.

It was the 1900 census that presented some interesting information. Census forms changed over the years; one of the changes was the requirement to list the place of birth of the parents of each of the persons in the census. And in Major Boynton’s line on the census, place of birth for this mother was Spain.

I knew that Major Boynton’s wife was from Germany, but I had never heard that his mother was born in Spain. A bit of looking found a biography of Major Boynton and it listed his mother as Frances Rendt Boynton, daughter of “Old Captain Lewis Rendt.” In looking at Captain Rendt, his actual name was Johann Ludwig Rendt, and he was born in 1773 in Germany. He was a Hessian soldier who had served in the British army.

The British would “lease” entire battalions of Hessian soldiers to join their side in various conflicts; Captain Rendt had fought for the British in the war of 1812 against the United States. As part of his payment, he was granted land in the province of Ontario, very near the Michigan border.

He married Joaquina Josepha Sophia Arliano from Cadiz, Spain and together they had eight children, born in Spain, Malta, and Canada. Among them was Frances Margaret Rendt, Major Boynton’s mother. She married Granville F. Boynton in Port Huron, Michigan. Granville died in 1845, and Frances remarried to Jonathan Graves. They had two sons together, who were half brothers to Major Boynton.

In today’s terms, that would make Major Boynton “Hispanic,” although such a categorization was unknown at the time. Major Boynton’s father was of English heritage, so Major Boynton certainly illustrates the melting pot of America as people of all lands sought its shores. You just never know what the census may reveal.

MAJOR NATHAN BOYNTON

On a Sunday afternoon in the fall of 1894, a couple of Yankees boarded Captain Fred Voss’s sailboat, “Victor,” for a trip south of the body of water called Lake Worth. Several lakes were being joined into the Intracoastal Waterway, and boats then could ply the route to a point south of today’s Delray Beach. Lillie Pierce Voss, the captain’s wife and first Caucasian born between Jupiter and Biscayne Bay was along for the ride and remembered it well, even in 1965 when she recorded memories of the day spent with Major Nathan Smith Boynton and his friend, Colonel William Linton. A year or two earlier, both men had stayed at the Palm Beach Coconut Hotel, and maybe that’s where they decided to return and establish towns nearby. Boynton decided to buy 500 acres, including a mile of ocean beach just north of Linton’s purchase.

The Major was 57 then, and already had packed a lot into his years. Born in Port Huron, Michigan, in 1837, he was 22 when he wed Annie Fields/Fidelei, and 25 when he enlisted in the Union Army, Company C, Eighth Michigan Cavalry. After the war, he went to Marine City, south of Port Huron where he became Postmaster, Deputy Assessor of Internal Revenue, Village Clerk, and President. Government seemed to appeal to him, for in 1868 he was elected to the State Legislature and, after returning to his hometown as editor and publisher of The Port Huron Press, he served two terms as Mayor: 1874-1876 and 1894-1896.

Then Boynton became one of the earliest “snow bird” residents of south Florida, dividing his time between Port Huron and the town he founded: Boynton. Like snow birds of later years, a search for winter sun may have brought him to the area after ill-health caused his retirement in 1883 at 46. Possibly, local climate renewed his health, as records state he enjoyed farming celery and other foods for the tables of his Boynton Beach Hotel. With 50 rooms and several cottages on the beach ridge where Ocean Avenue met the Atlantic, the hotel was built in 1897 and quickly became a tourist mecca. The year it opened, a plat for part of the town was made by Fred Dewey, Model Land Company agent, and his wife, “Birdie” Spilman Dewey—later a charter member of the Boynton Woman’s Club.

Boynton died quietly in Port Huron in the summer of 1911. Hailed as “father” of the Order of the Knights of Maccabees, an organization he’d wanted to bring to Boynton, too, he also was remembered for inventing the Boynton Fire Escape, Boynton Hook and Ladder Truck, and fire-fighting systems. But he’s probably best remembered in Florida, where his sole memorial stands. It’s not the hotel—that was razed in 1925 to make way for a bigger and better one that hurricanes and the Great Depression cancelled. It’s the Boynton Woman’s Club building, started via a donation of $35,000 from the Major’s four (of six) remaining heirs in 1925.

Now look at the receipt for payment Harvey Oyer received on September 3, 1961, shown below:

While the $1.20 was for rent for only 3 months, the amount for six months would be $2.40, and annually, $4.80.

All things considered, incomes were not so great in 1961 either. My first teaching contract in Duval County (Jacksonville) for the school year 1960-61 was for $3,300. Take home pay was about $2,700. That did not include any health insurance or Social Security. Teachers in Florida were not included in the Social Security program at that time, and had to rely on the Florida Teachers Retirement system. In the 1970s all teachers became eligible along with other state employees to enroll in the Florida Retirement System (FRS) and contracts also required Social Security enrollment. Life and health insurance enrollment became available separately as options under state or county group insurance plans.

The Boynton Beach State Bank stood on the southeast corner of Ocean Avenue and Federal Highway. Note the street light in the foreground and the wooden light poles on the left. When Federal Highway was later widened, part of the bank lot became part of Federal Highway. All the buildings shown were razed and new ones erected farther east as development also occurred in the areas behind the bank.
