THE AUDUBON SOCIETY:
The Audubon Society of the Everglades (ASE) has a mission to conserve wildlife, especially birds, and the environment that supports them. Maxine Schreiber will share the history of the Audubon Society as well as a brief history about John James Audubon, the man who inspired the name for the organization. Audubon’s monumental work Birds of America, still considered one of the greatest examples of book art, consists of 435 hand-colored, life-size prints of 497 bird species made from engraved copper plates. In addition to sharing Audubon’s life, Maxine will present a slideshow of fifty of his magnificent prints as she provides the history of the Society, which was founded in the late 1860s. For more than a century, the Audubon Society has built a legacy of conservation success by mobilizing the strength of its network of members, chapters, Audubon centers, state offices, and dedicated professional staff to connect people with nature and the power to protect it. The local chapter, the Audubon Society of the Everglades, has played an important role.

ABOUT OUR SPEAKER:
MAXINE SCHREIBER, after having received her B.A. in Fine Arts from Kean University, and a Master's in Expressive Therapies from Lesley University, put teaching and exhibiting her paintings aside to practice as a psychotherapist. In 2001, she picked up her brushes again and has been painting ever since. As a juried artist member of Women In The Visual Arts, Artists of Palm Beach County and the National Association of Women Artists, Maxine’s oil paintings, watercolors, collages, and photographs have been in numerous juried exhibitions in local museums, galleries, and Art in Public Places. In 2014 she wrote, illustrated, and published "The Story of Daphne the Duck," a children’s picture book. An active member of the Audubon Society of the Everglades, she has presented lectures on “John James Audubon, the Man, the Artist, and the Society that Honors Him” for the Art on Park Gallery in Lake Park and the Mandel Public Library in West Palm Beach.

REMEMBERING BOYNTON’S G.A.L.A
For a number of years from 1982 until the early 2000s the City of Boynton sponsored a street fair with an acronym which stood for Great American Love Affair. Booths were erected primarily along Ocean Avenue between the Intracoastal Canal and Federal Highway representing promotion for various organizations, musicians and artists, and the sale of assorted craft products.

The event was sponsored by the City of Boynton Beach and the Greater Boynton Beach Chamber of Commerce.

Originally the G.A.L.A. had been held on the grounds of the City Civic Center, but with the construction of new municipal buildings, the sponsors decided in 1988 to move it to the new site. The idea was to keep it downtown to help promote downtown businesses.

But not all the shopkeepers were pleased and some complained they had not been consulted before the new location was selected. Because they felt the congestion and crowds would be disruptive during the Fridays and Saturdays on which the event was scheduled, they decided to close their shops for those days. But the event continued for over a dozen more years and at first with ever-increasing attendance. [Continued page 4, G.A.L.A.]
The INTERNATIONAL KINETIC ART EXHIBIT and SYMPOSIUM
A UNIQUE BOYNTON BEACH EVENT
On February 2 and 3 of this year the City of Boynton Beach Art in Public Places program presented this biennial event in conjunction with the Kinetic Art Organization (KAO), Ocean One, LLC, Boynton Beach CRA, International Sculpture Center, CODAworx, and media partners Art Hive Magazine, Culture Owl and The Coastal Star.

This exhibit which Boynton has hosted every two years since 2013 is specific to Boynton Beach. A dozen kinetic art sculptures on display throughout the City since October are part of the City’s program, Art in Public Places.

Debbi Coles-Dobay, who is the Public Arts Manager for the City has defined kinetic art as that which may be powered by solar, water, wind, gravity and human interaction. She notes that each installation has an augmented reality component to deepen a viewer’s experience and, in some situations, allow visitors to enter and shape the artwork. She describes this as art in four dimensions.

Tom Brewitz had also a number of works in the Indoor Kinetic Art display which was housed in a tent at the northeast corner of Ocean Avenue and Federal Highway.

All the events including the symposia art experiences were open free to the public.

One of the artists, Tom Brewitz, works from a studio in Boynton Beach where he creates his one-of-a-kind kinetic pieces. A three part sculpture, which he has named “Phoenix Rising,” has been on display at the gazebo at Pete’s Pond. In mythology the phoenix rises from the ashes and has inspired Brewitz’s stainless steel, aqua tinted flying birds which he avows will withstand harsh weather conditions and still move with ease.
Construction sites are surrounded by fences with blue screen blocking the view.

The playground behind the 1913 Schoolhouse Children’s Museum is no more. Mike Fitzpatrick who had helped build the original playground has tried to have some of the equipment moved elsewhere with very limited success.

This building did not become rubble! The Historic 1927 High School building is still under renovation. This photo taken from the front porch of the Schoolhouse Children's Museum shows that the upper corner damaged years ago by lightning still needs repair. Windows, roof, and floors have been replaced. The windows are unlike the weighted sash wooden windows with single glass panes in upper and lower sections that were originally installed. Other interior replacements are yet ongoing.
Gradually, however, the costs of sponsoring the event increased, the City charged more for booth space, and fewer local groups and artists participated. Civic groups such as Kiwanis, Lions and Rotary were once given free space, and despite their ongoing service to the community, were in later years charged fees to participate. Other cities, such as Delray Beach and Boca Raton held similar events during the year which led to reduced attendance at the G.A.L.A. And during those years many of the downtown businesses closed or moved westward as Congress Avenue developed. Ultimately the G.A.L.A. was discontinued.

Each year the City sponsored the creation of a G.A.L.A. poster to sell in honor of the occasion to offset some of the expense. One of the loveliest (shown above), created by Gary Calabro, was printed in 2001 and depicted the Woman’s Club, the beach and fishing boats with scatterings of hibiscus flowers along the borders.

BOYNTON NAMES and a MARYLAND E-MAIL
Editor’s Note: Sometimes one of our members shares a letter or an email that we feel compelled to share with our readers. We copy the following because it mentions so many people who were prominent in an earlier Boynton.

Recently the Treasurer of the Boynton Beach Historical Society, Frances Tuite McKeral, had an exchange with another of our members, Bob Gayler who lives in Maryland, relative to the fact that he paid 2019 dues twice. She emailed to ask what she should do with the money and also mentioned that she sometimes sits near a stained glass window in the Methodist Church that bears the Gayler name and at other times near the window dedicated to her grandmother Kate Rousseau. Here is Bob Gayler’s reply:

"Frances,
Thank you for your email. Please use the money for 2020.
Your middle name suggests a relationship with Mrs. Tuite, who was one of my elementary school teachers, highly thought of in Boynton.
My oldest brother Winfred Wade "Bo" Gayler graduated on Boynton High class of 1943. In those days able bodied men went promptly into the Army. He trained at Ft. Benning, GA and less than 18 months later was killed in action near Metz, France, Nov 16 1944 in the fighting just prior to the “Battle of the Bulge.” I was 7 years old at the time. When the new sanctuary building was built my parents wanted to have the window as a memorial to him.

"Mrs. Rousseau was one of the strong women of the church. My mother never learned to drive—she did a fair amount of horseback riding growing up on a farm in Georgia—so I or one of my brothers drove her to church every Sunday. Mom always spoke of people by their last names as a matter of courtesy. I did not know a lot of first names. Other teachers at the school included Mrs. Mercer, Mrs. Weaver, Mrs. Tatum. The Methodist pastor during the War was Rev. Davies, with an e. He was from England or Wales. He was part of the coast watch team for German submarines. My wife and I go each August to the Delaware coast. There is a watchtower on the beach south of Rehobeth as a reminder of the role of the coastline watchers.

"I hope you have a good day and thanks for all you do to keep memories of the old days alive.
Bob Gayler"

TWO CITY BUILDINGS—ONE RENOVATED, the SECOND PROJECTED

In this picture the 1927 Historic High School appears to be in near finished state, but over 20 years of neglect by the City created some real difficulties with the roof, the flooring, the electrical system and other parts that could have been better maintained. Slowly all the deficiencies are being corrected and the newly renovated building should be dedicated sometime later in the spring.
