OUR GOLDEN CELEBRATION

The Boynton Beach Historical Society was established in 1968, so in 2018 we are celebrating 50 years of service to the community. To honor our achievements the Board of Directors is planning several events throughout the year.

Most of us like cake, so there will be a number of opportunities to eat what one might call ongoing birthday cake sampling. We had slices of two flavors available at our February program meeting and expect to serve some on other occasions.

But, on a more serious note, we are planning to print a "Memory Book," in which we plan to include pictures, anecdotes, descriptions of events and an updated "timeline." It will be patterned after the "Blue Book" published in 1995 by the Boynton Beach Historical Society in cooperation with Friends of the Boynton Beach City Library entitled Boynton Beach: The First 100 Years.

We need the help of all our members and friends in order to accomplish this. Please let us copy your photos, letters, awards or other materials that will help make this book a part of your life that is a part of Boynton history. You can email us or send materials through U.S. mail to Box 12, Boynton Beach 33425 or bring them to us in person at any of our program meetings including the May dinner meeting.

We are planning other aspects to our celebration that we will announce as they approach, but we need extra time to assemble materials for this memory project, and, especially, WE NEED YOUR HELP to make it happen.

UPDATE ON HISTORIC 1927 HIGH SCHOOL and SURROUNDING AREA

After years of neglect, the old 1927 Boynton High School appears to be saved. The Boynton Beach Historical Society has struggled for years to save two buildings since the early 1990s when the Palm Beach County School Board deeded the 1913 schoolhouse and the 1927 building to the City of Boynton Beach.

Within a few years of the transfer, the 1913 schoolhouse opened in the early 2000s as the 1913 Schoolhouse Children's Museum [later designated the 1913 Schoolhouse Children's Museum and Learning Center]. But the City displayed indifference to the preservation of the 1927 structure always citing the high estimated cost of renovation as a reason for doing nothing. Several proposals for its reconstruction and use were aired over the years, but none came to fruition.

Now the City is proposing and seeking funding for a multimillion dollar, 16-acre redevelopment project which includes the old high school, the current library and police station. Plans call for transforming this tract, which is to be known as Town Square, into a town center with new and modern public buildings such as a City Hall and fire station, a 40,000 square foot amphitheater, parks, parking spaces and apartments, a hotel and retail space to be funded through a private/public partnership.

The City plans to demolish the current library and replace it with a four-story... [continued on p.5 - Buildings]
SOME RECOLLECTIONS OF 20th CENTURY LIFE
by Voncile Smith

I marvel at the many changes in life around me that I have been privileged to observe in the many years I have lived in South Florida. This morning, for example, I was discussing earlier years with a person who has lived in the area for more than 40 years, but he could not imagine how anyone was able to exist without air-conditioning. He was astounded when I told him we did not miss what we had never had. In the days prior to air-conditioned homes, we stayed indoors or in shady areas during the hottest part of the day, tried not to overexert physically, and drank an abundance of liquids. I remember sleeping under light cover during nights throughout the summer.

In the 1930s, 40s and 50s the area did not have the many roads, homes and multi-story buildings that hold and radiate heat and may block the prevailing easterly winds we enjoy for much of the year. There were far fewer black asphalt surfaces and far more dirt or shell rock streets and roads in both the rural and town areas. Few buildings exceeded two stories, and houses were built primarily of lumber (often Dade County pine) with high ceilings in the rooms, wooden floors elevated above the ground to allow crawl space beneath the house, and windows placed strategically to encourage cross ventilation. And there was greenery everywhere. With an absence of condominiums, most people lived in houses with ample yards filled with vegetation. Admittedly there were many flowering plants that were exotic, often having arrived from the Caribbean or South America. Dreadful exotics like melaleuca, Australian pine, and water hyacinths fanned across the land, rivers and canals creating problems some of which we experience even today.

brought new people into the state where new funding encouraged the rapid building of many single-family homes, often duplicative tract-houses with poured concrete floors and cement block walls, both of which hold moisture and heat. Large sections of land were cleared for housing developments with native palmettos, pines and ground-covers stripped away to be replaced post-construction with limited exotic vegetation, few trees and St. Augustine grass.

Sprinkler systems to water the new vegetation were relatively rare until well into the 1980s and people irrigated with portable sprinklers attached to hoses that users needed to move frequently to reach all the plantings in one's yard. St. Augustine grass likes water.

Many houses in the 1930s and 40s had no bathrooms. People in them relied on outhouses and sponge baths. If a house had indoor plumbing, one bathroom was considered all that was needed and was perhaps all that was affordable. No one had a shower unless it was a hose draped over a tree limb outdoors. Automatic water heaters were rare since they were "wasteful" and expensive to operate. We had a kerosene water heater on our back porch. It was connected to the bath, but not the kitchen and my mother lit it but once a week. Unless I heated water on the kitchen stove, I took cold water baths on days other than Saturday.

The Oyer buildings on East Ocean Avenue were attached to septic tanks until the mid-1990s

Often towns and cities had no sewer systems, and homes as well as businesses, were connected to septic tanks. Even when sewer lines were installed, replacement of septic tanks was not guaranteed. In the mid-1990s Harvey Oyer was dismayed to discover when he had a plumbing problem that all his commercial buildings on Ocean Avenue in Boynton were still connected to septic tanks. Harvey had been paying the City for sewage disposal for years and did not realize his buildings had never been converted. He got no refund from the City and instead had to pay several thousand dollars for sewer connections.
[Buildings - continued from p.3] combined City Hall and library. The library has major water intrusion problems and, according to Vice Mayor Justin Katz, architects estimate repair costs would be greater to repair the building and locate the new City Hall at a different location than to tear down the library and build a new one that combines the two facilities.

A new fire station will be erected on NE 1st Street.

The historic high school is now under renovation as a cultural arts and civic center. Estimated cost for renovation is $10.5 million. The 1913 Schoolhouse Children's Museum and Learning Center will remain.

FLORIDA STILL HAS CATTLE DRIVES and RANCHES
A recent email from Harvey Oyer, III, indicates he plans to ride in the annual cattle drive in Immokalee on March 10, moving 200 head of cattle. All the riders are either Seminole Indians or multi-generation Floridians.

It’s the annual Immokalee Cattle Drive and Jamboree, a day-long festival of the Immokalee Pioneer Museum at Roberts Ranch. In Collier County around Immokalee real cowboys on real ranches are working real cattle every day, all day.

Clint Raulerson is the cattle-drive boss. He’s a 5th generation cattleman. “I work now for a ranch owned by the granddaughter of the man my grandfather worked for. I ride the same ground my father and grandfather rode. I’m on horseback every day before daylight. We move cattle from pasture to pasture, load ‘em on trucks and take ‘em to market in Okeechobee or Arcadia. I look after several ranches, a little over 2000 head of cattle.”

Rendering by E2L Real Estate Solutions of proposed Police Station

Plans call for the current police station to be razed and a new 53,000-square-foot building to be built at S.E. Gateway Boulevard and High Ridge Road next to Fire Station 5. This proposed relocation has generated some controversy since City Commissioner Joe Casello believes this location is too far from the City's downtown.

JKM Developers and E2L Real Estate Solutions as the private venture in this project will construct 705 residential units in three buildings which may be as high as 8, 6 and 4 stories. Because the developer plans to include workforce housing, the City will allow a height bonus in return. The tallest residential building will have ground floor commercial space and is expected to be built at Boynton Beach Boulevard and N.E. First Street.

A 120-room hotel is proposed at the corner of Boynton Beach Boulevard and Seacrest.

UPCOMING MEETINGS
The next three program meetings of the Boynton Beach Historical Society are all scheduled to be at the First Presbyterian Church Fellowship Hall. Monday, March 19 and Monday, April 16 will be evening presentations at 6:45. Sunday, May 6 is our traditional covered-dish dinner at 5:00 p.m. Look for more details on this last event before we take a summer break in the April and May newsletters. We have our 50th anniversary in mind.
