The HISTORY of LOXAHATCHEE RIVER BATTLEFIELD PARK

a presentation by Guy Bachmann, President of the Loxahatchee Battlefield Preservationists, is the topic for the September 15 meeting of the Boynton Beach Historical Society.

This park is one of the most significant multi-level historic sites in Palm Beach County. While providing entrance to the Loxahatchee River, this location represents prehistoric and historic habitation dating back over 5000 years. It was also the place where two battles took place during the Second Seminole War.

A LETTER from BBHS President, JANET DeVRIES

Greetings,

The clock continues to tick forward and the calendar indicates the month of September has arrived once again meaning fall is close behind. What I like about fall is not only that the weather cools off a few degrees, but also that the Boynton Beach Historical Society once again gets together for our monthly meetings, history presentations and history strolls. If you are not attending our meetings, you are missing some wonderful history programs presented by esteemed Florida historians and noted legendary locals. For those who are reading this from afar, please keep in touch by sending in your photographs, family stories and memories! You keep our history alive.

Our website is growing; we now have back issues of The Historian from 2002 to 2013 online. Our website address is www.boyntonhistory.org. [Continued on page 2—DeVries]

In addition to The Historian our website includes a photo-stream of vintage and historic photographs and interesting accounts of local research findings. Our Facebook page usually has a lively exchange of newer and long-time Boynton history fans reminiscing about our local lore and illustrious past. Everyone is welcome to view the site or join us. One of the Historical Society's new features is the Weekend History Stroll series. These "grown-up field trips" welcome members and friends of all ages. Guided tours to places of interest such as Downtown Boynton, Historic Lake Trail, Loxahatchee Battlefield Park and the High Ridge Scrub Area are free-of-charge. For the 2014-2015 year, we are planning History Strolls of the Boynton Firehouse and Emergency Operations

Center Tour, Seacrest Scrub Natural Area, Palm Beach Lake Trail, Boynton Memorial Park Cemetery, Downtown Boynton, The Society of the Four Arts Garden, and the Richard and Pat Johnson History Museum of the Historical Society of Palm Beach County.

As the year progresses, I look forward to connecting with you. In the past few years, I had had the opportunity to visit, to reminisce and to interview a number of fascinating members of our Boynton community. Each person's story adds to our collective history. It is through telling these stories and sharing primary documents such as photographs, scrapbooks, newspapers and other memento of our history that we are able to chronicle our history for future generations.

The Boynton Beach Historical Society could not endure without the support and the participation of our members and the volunteer work of our Board of Directors, Trustees and committee members. I invite you to share your time and talent in furthering the mission of the Society. Please reach out to me or another board member to discuss ways you can help. In order to sustain the organization, we need additional members to take on leadership and committee roles.

Yours in history,

Janet DeVries, President

BOYNTON'S WAITE BIRD FARM

By Janet DeVries

[Editor's Note: Janet posted this as a blog on the historical society's website in December, 2013, after interviewing Dr. Howard Waite, Jr., one of our members. Howard passed away this summer, and it seems an appropriate tribute to him and his family to give all of our members an opportunity to read her article. The original article can still be found at boyntonhistory.org/?s=waite.]

The Waite Bird Farm, founded and operated by Howard and Angela Waite, served as a popular tourist attraction from 1947 to 1978.

The bird farm, located on North Federal Highway at the Boynton city limits, once existed as the State of Florida's largest breeder of rare and exotic birds.

The breeding farm first operated as the Lewis Bird Farm.

The Waites, along with son Howard, relocated to Lake Worth, Florida from Ohio in the early 1940s. Howard, formerly a radio engineer, married Angela Kellack, a teacher from Chicago, in 1928.

The Waites raised the birds in colonies, with Angela nurturing and hand feeding the fledglings and Howard traveling to Mexico to buy birds and others animals for the zoo and to sell.

The popular tourist attraction drew visitors from all over the state. People flocked to see the colorful parrots, toucans, ostriches, peacocks and macaws. The zoo at the Waite Bird Farm included giant tortoises, trained monkeys, alligators and a leopard.

Growing up surrounded by animals and caring for sick species inspired Howard Waite to study veterinary medicine at Alabama Polytechnic University (now Auburn University). Following his 1959 graduation, he served as veterinarian for his family's menagerie.

In the next few years, he, along with Charlie Camus and George Samra founded the Zoological Society of Palm Beach County which led to the 1969 establishment of the Dreher Park Zoo (now the Palm Beach Zoo) with colleague Paul Dreher.

After the Florida Turnpike extended its concrete ribbon through South Florida, traffic passing the quaint landmark dwindled and condominiums and large stores replaced the allure and charm of roadside Florida.

The bird farm closed in 1960, however the Waites continued operating the business as a pet shop until 1978.

In the late 1970s and 1980s, Howard Waite, Jr. used his artistic talent to contribute to Florida Audubon and other wildlife magazines with his pen and ink drawings.

Today Howard "Bud" Waite lives in east Boynton Beach and is an active member of the Boynton Beach Historical Society. The building once housing Boynton's exotic pet dealership still exists on the corner of North Federal between Potter and Dimick Roads.

SEPTEMBER HISTORY STROLL

If you wish to participate in the next History Stroll, Janet DeVries has announced that it will occur on Saturday, September 27, 2014, 9:00 a.m. at Fire Station #5 – Emergency Operations Center, 2080 High Ridge Road (just south of Gateway Boulevard and just west of I-95), Boynton Beach, Florida 33426. People can sign up on line, if they desire, at <http://www.eventbrite.com/e/boynton-beach-history-stroll-fire-station-5-tickets-12872541117?aff=es2&rank=2> or they can call 561-327-4690.

The Boynton Beach Fire Rescue Station #5 and Emergency Operations Center facility stands as the first building in the City's history to be hardened to withstand a Category 5 hurricane. The modern construction of this multi-functional facility takes firefighting and City operations to a new level. The public art displayed in the building exists to depict the heritage and character of the fire service throughout the City's history leading up to today's modern, comprehensive level of fire rescue and emergency preparedness operations. The public art elements provide visual references of historical timelines to the viewer, and when translated by artists as seen here, communicate portals to our City's past.

ANOTHER IDEA TO SAVE AND USE
1927 SCHOOLHOUSE

The following information was recently sent to the Society and, although the Board of Directors has of this date taken no stand, some members may wish to participate. A group of Military Veterans seeks to convert the old high school into the Veterans Memorabilia Museum and Education Center. They will ask the City Commission to use the $170,000 set aside to demolish the building to begin rebuilding the facility. The plan is to "MARCH ON CITY HALL" Tuesday, September 16th at 6:30 p.m. One of the leaders is apparently Cpl Burt Richards who played Major Nathan Boynton in the 100th Anniversary Reenactment of the arrival of Major Boynton in 1994. The memo we received states that he and his "Army" will "battle" for preservation and the creation of the museum. A Capt. Krenshaw indicates that more information is available through e-mail sent to PR.GROUP@JUNO.COM

JANET DEVRIES AND GINGER PEDERSEN MAKE AN HISTORIC FIND

The Boynton Beach Historical Society and Palm Beach County are benefitting from the enthusiasm for and the joy of discovery that historical research brings to two of our officers, Janet DeVries and Ginger Pedersen. We remember two years ago their revelations about the real founders of the Town of Boynton—the Deweys, and we have appreciated their interviews and postings of stories of various persons connected with our history.

They review historic sites on the internet, go through archives and land records, and occasionally search E-Bay for items listed for sale that might have some relevance to South Florida history. They were recently rewarded when they discovered an old photo item listed by a Texas based archaeologist, Bob Wishoff, who found the old album at a sale in Austin. Janet began an e-mail conversation with him and decided the pictures were made primarily before World War I in the Manalapan area. She purchased it and received it in the mail in July.

There were a few, rather limited written clues with the pictures, but Janet combed through old land records and discovered that the names Romyn and Leila fit with a family named Pierson who lived in, and actually owned most of Manalapan. Pictures of the old Boynton Beach Hotel which was demolished in 1925 helped to establish the dates. Romyn Pierson died in the influenza epidemic in 1919, so the pictures of the family were probably taken sometime between 1912 and 1919. They show a Florida long erased by development.

Pictures from the album include this labeled photograph of the old Boynton Beach Hotel Cottages. Such information provides clues to the dates of all the pictures in the album.

Old property records show that the entire stretch of Manalapan was owned by one family, that of Romyn Pierson, Sr. Newspaper articles from the time reveal that the wealthy New Jersey man came to the property by boat with his wife Leila in 1912. At the time the only building on the oceanfront land was a house built in 1892. A few years later, standing there with his wife, Romyn reportedly said, as he pointed to the land stretching from the Boynton Inlet to Lantana beach, "This is yours. All yours."

The Piersons had three children, including son A. Romyn Pierson, Jr. who may be the person who took most of the photographs. He is pictured in several of them lying in the sand.

Romyn Pierson, Jr. lying in the sand of the family's Manalapan property. Dressed in a WWI uniform, this is similar to earlier photos which show him posing as a wounded military man, and even posing under an American flag. Image ca. 1912-1917.

Howard Hood ca. 1975

BOYNTON BUSINESSMAN AND CIVIC LEADER

C. Howard Hood arrived in Boynton Beach Florida in February, 1937. The city had a population at that time of approximately 2,000 and most of the economic support came from dairy and produce farms. Howard opened a garage and filling station business (we now call them gas stations), and found himself in competition with Paul Mercer. Thus, Howard became the operator of the second gasoline and auto service in town.

In that depression era time of the late 1930s, it was cheaper to repair auto and farm equipment than to even consider buying new. Howard's business thrived on helping to keep anything on wheels moving. He found additional time to help the lone policeman (Mott Partin) as a law enforcement officer.

Time moved on and Howard ran for and was elected to the City Council from 1948 through 1955, spending more than six years as Vice-Mayor and a short time as Mayor.

Howard and his wife Edythe raised six children, one of whom, Nancy Hood McNamee, we honor on page 3 of this newsletter.
